Take some time to get used to the new office space before you request changes. Develop tolerance and empathy along the way - Be respectful. Take requests from your neighbors in stride - it's not personal.

Remember to modulate your voice – people do not always want to hear your conversations and phone calls.

Speakerphones and ringing phones are a distraction to those around you. Use the huddle rooms for conversations requiring a speakerphone. Be mindful of the volume setting on your cell phone.

Be sure to schedule huddle rooms or conference rooms for conference calls.

For telephone calls, personal calls, or face-to-face conversations that will be extended in duration, please move the conversation to a huddle room or open huddle area.

Be aware of sensitivities to odors and noises if you opt to eat at your desk, and whenever possible eat in the break room or open huddle areas.

Be aware that some people are highly sensitive to colognes, perfumes, incense, and lotions.

Be aware of trash odors, and make sure that all food and food wrappers are disposed of in the breakroom, or removed daily from work areas.

If you are sick stay home. Utilize conferencing and remote work technology to work from home as needed.

Grooming should occur away from the office.

Be mindful of clutter in your space. Items should not be taped or hung on workstation glass partitions. Plants and small personal decorative items may be placed on overhead and closet units. Nothing else should be stored on overhead and closet units.

Hanging items on drywall or plaster requires approval.

Maintain desktop plants in healthy condition, and use appropriate saucers to protect furniture and windowsills.

Leave small appliances and personal furniture at home. Let your manager know if you need something that has not been provided.
